

The Rapid Response feature on the CFP website allows readers to comment positively and negatively on the content of the journal. Readers can report errors or omissions, clarify specific points, and add pertinent information from the literature. By participating in an on-line discussion of individual articles, readers and CFP staff can work together to improve the journal in particular, and contribute to the advancement of medical knowledge in general.

The Rapid Response feature can be accessed by using the Rapid Response button found on the journal's homepage or in the menu at the top right-hand side of each on-line article.

Find a mistake? Let us know. Enjoy an article? We like to hear that too.

Correction

In the article "Improving prevention in primary care. Evaluating the sustainability of outreach facilitation," which appeared in the May issue of Canadian Family Physician (Can Fam Physician 2008;54:712-20), references 29 and 30 were inadvertently omitted. The omitted references are as follows:
